Join us as we discuss the Eastern Mediterranean's export opportunities and options for alternative monetization

Register by 10 February and Save 10%

We invite you to join executives and speakers from top operators and regional governments as they discuss key issues, project updates and current opportunities in the burgeoning Eastern Mediterranean natural gas industry at the Eastern Mediterranean Gas Conference.

A series of recent discoveries by Noble Energy, the largest operator in the region, has increased the estimated gross resources of natural gas awaiting development in the area to 40 trillion cubic feet (Tcf). Industry-leading companies are preparing to increase their regional presence. Policy is currently being made to determine how natural gas will be exported. Cyprus, Israel, Greece and Egypt are in the middle of negotiations on the exclusive economic zone (EEZ). Greece is also holding its Second International Licensing round for 20 blocks in the Ionian and Cretan Seas. Along with infrastructure development in the region, experienced operators are needed to extract the gas in the Leviathan and Tamar fields. The development of the gas industry in this emerging region not only has the potential to fulfill regional demand, but also to impact European and Middle Eastern gas markets.

During the two-day conference, you will have numerous opportunities to
